Entry Description:

Another point of view is an open project inspired by quantum physics. In the realm of quantum physics, observing something actually influences the physical process that is taking place. Amazed by compared it to photographyc. I am collecting a number of photos where I purposely change my point of view shooting from above. I try to reproduce the point of view of a scientist, I imagine to w everyday life seeing through the lens of a microscope, distributed as electrons in an experiment. I attempt to be like quantum physicists trying to live the paradox of objectively observing life, knowin at the same time.

I openly want to highlight how much we are used to observe everyday life from a customary point of view, which surely is personal, but it is such a habit that we often forget what we are doing. I wo only our ideas about existence, but even our forgetfulness about the process of watching, could influence and determine its outcome.
